TWITTER

Step 1: Go to <http://twitter.com>.

When you get to Twitter.com, you'll see this page:

Step 2: Click the Join the conversation! Green Box

This page will appear:

Step 3: Create a Username.

If you are using this twitter account for brand management ~~for~~ of your business, we'd recommend using your domain name minus the dot com/net/etc. (ie. <http://twitter.com/mollermarketing>)

Add your email address, personal or business.

Type in the security code then click "I accept, Create my Account". Reading the Terms of Service is optional, but recommended.)

Step 4: Start connecting!

As you can see by the picture below, Twitter asks for your email information. They state very clearly that they don't use or share your information anywhere:

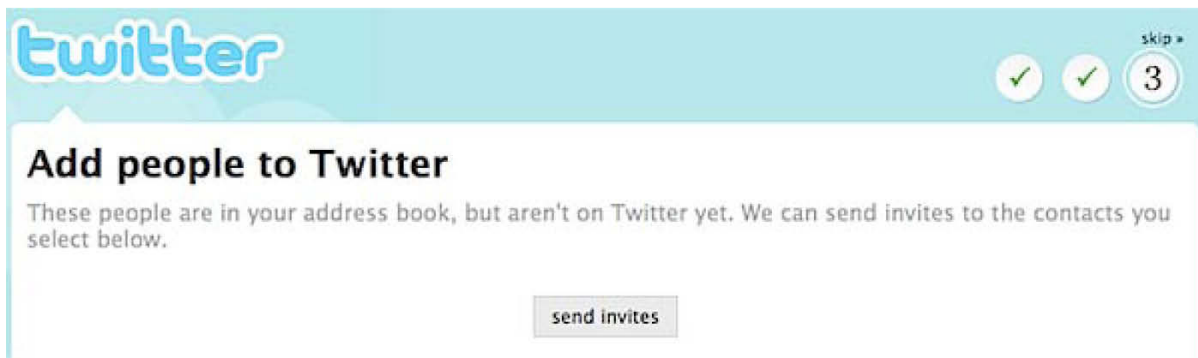

Here's what the next page will look like:

What's exciting is that Twitter can scan through all of your email addresses to see which of your contacts is already registered with a Twitter account. You can hand pick which of your new "Twitter Friends" you want to follow.

There's also an option where you can invite non-Twitter users to set up Twitter accounts - it looks like this:

If you plan to use Twitter for business and you already have a pretty big database of names and emails, this could be a great opportunity to show your clients you care by connecting with them in a new way. Twitter can be a great way to communicate and deal with Customer Care issues too!

Step 5: You're now an official Twitter User!
